DEN regularly conducts parking rate market studies to ensure DEN parking prices are competitive with local parking rates, are in line with other similarly sized airports across the country and cover the airport's operating costs. Rates were last increased in September 2019.

Through the recent study, it was determined that DEN should slightly increase parking rates in select lots based on demand and the increased costs to maintain and operate the lots.

"The cost of doing business and operating our lots has significantly increased over the last several years," said DEN Chief Operating Officer Steve Jaquith. "This slight rate increase will ensure DEN can continue to provide a variety of parking options to our passengers at different price points."
