Food in a Flash Before Your Flight

DEN's Newest Innovative Way to Enhance the Passenger Experience

DENVER – Nov. 12, 2020 – Denver International Airport (DEN) is excited to announce another way to grab a bite to eat while at the airport. Eats Delivered, a new 12-month pilot program, brings food straight to travelers wherever they are at DEN. With Eats Delivered, travelers can avoid the lines and reduce contact by ordering and paying for their food through an app and have it delivered directly to their gate or another location such as baggage claim.

“We are always exploring opportunities to make the journey through DEN more relaxing and enjoyable,” said DEN Chief Executive Officer Kim Day. “Eats Delivered not only saves passengers time but provides a safer, touchless experience and more access to our great dining options throughout the airport.”

DEN's Eats Delivered program, serviced by AtYourGate, provides travelers with a touchless experience by ordering and paying over the app. The service is available from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. daily and delivery is available throughout the airport. Food will be delivered in approximately 30 minutes or less by an AtYourGate employee who will follow COVID-19 health precautions. To use the service, travelers should download the AtYourGate app (available in the Apple app store, coming soon to Google Play) and place their order. A $4.99 delivery fee applies, but menu prices remain the same as dine-in or grab and go.

Currently, there are seven participating restaurants: Denver Central Market, Einstein's Bagels, Garbanzo, McDonald's, Root Down, Timberline Steaks & Grille and Vino Volo. DEN is working to add more dining options soon.

Here's how it works:

- Download the At Your Gate app (available in the Apple app store, coming soon to Google Play)
- GPS recognizes the user's current location (or users can identify their location if location services are turned off on their device)
- Select a delivery location
- Scroll through participating restaurants and select from menu options
- Complete payment through the app and let the team take it from there
- The app will notify travelers when their order has arrived at the drop-off location
- Enjoy your meal!
