Denver International Airport Names Steve Jaquith as Chief Operating Officer

DENVER – June 24, 2021 – Today, Denver International Airport (DEN) announced the appointment of Steve Jaquith as its Chief Operating Officer (COO). As one of five executive vice president positions at the airport, he will be responsible for managing DEN's largest business unit including airport operations, maintenance, sustainability, parking and ground transportation.

Jaquith brings nearly 40 years of airline experience working in customer service and operations. His most recent role was the Vice President of Airport Operations for United Airlines where he had oversight of a $200 million annual budget and 4,000 employees. Prior to that, Jaquith served as the Managing Director for United Airlines Denver Hub and Rocky Mountain Region. He also worked for Continental Airlines in a number of different positions.

"We are so pleased that Steve has decided to join DEN as our new COO," said DEN CEO Kim Day. "Steve has been a DEN partner for years, and he brings significant aviation experience, enabling him to step right in and help us develop a path forward to a successful future."

Jaquith will begin his new role on June 30, 2021.

Denver International Airport is the third-busiest airport in the United States and one of the top ten busiest airports in the world. DEN is the primary economic engine for the state of Colorado, generating more than $33 billion for the region annually.
